

THE ELECTION FIGURES

DEMOCRATS WIN ASSOCIATE JUDGES AND 8 CO. OFFICIALS.

McPherson Elected Judge and Five Republican Officials—Prothonotary in Doubt.

At the election on Tuesday more of the citizens went to the polls and voted than had attended an election for years. From eighty-five to ninety per cent. of the electors of the county voted but strange to say that all of them did not vote the non-partisan ticket as the total vote for some of the other candidates outnumbered those cast for the judges. The ticket was large and cumbersome and was not thoroughly understood notwithstanding the opportunities every voter had to study the ballot. The figures given in the following tables are not official but carefully compiled from the returns made to the Prothonotary's office.

The majority for D. P. McPherson in Adams county is 419, and the majority for J. L. Butt in Fulton county is 147, giving the district to Mr. McPherson by 272.

DOUGHERTY & HARTLEY

Lard and Kerosene

WHEN making pies you know that the flakiness of the crust depends to a large extent upon the quality of the shortening. Unless the lard is right, your skill, your eggs, your flour and your milk all go for nothing. You're particular about your shortening, but are you equally careful of the kerosene you put into your lamps, heaters and stoves. Ask for by name and you buy a kerosene that's refined from the best petroleum, by methods which get the utmost possible out of the finest raw material this old earth provides.

Use in a lamp it gives a soft yet brilliant light. It will neither smell nor smoke. In stove or heater it furnishes an intense heat, but always at the lowest possible cost.

And because it's a highly refined kerosene, it adds to the life of the device in which it is used.

Include Atlantic Rayolight Oil in your market list just as you do any other household utility of known reputation. Call for it by name and you get a superior kerosene that costs no more than the nameless kind.

How'd you set about getting rid of a dab of paint on the window pane? The easiest thing in the world—rub it off with Atlantic Rayolight Oil. Never thought of that, eh? But do you know another use? If you do think one up, hold it for a few days and maybe you can exchange it for something your heart desires.

THE ATLANTIC REFINING CO.

The Comfiest, Coziest Room in the Home

is the one that houses a Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater and that should be your dining room. In that room a genial warmth is especially welcome. THE OLD LOG SCHOOL HOUSE

DESCRIBED BY J. HOWARD WERT OF HARRISBURG.

Delightful Sketch of Institution that Gave the World a Race of Giants.

"The Old Log School House" has been so embalmied in song and story that I want to tell you, readers, before going further, about that relic of past generations, that cradle of our liberty and greatness of to-day "the old log school house."

There are a very few old persons still living who can recall some of the later phases of the old log school house. To the generation of to-day no words of description that I can employ will convey any adequate conception of the difference between it and the handsome and completely equipped buildings for educational purposes now found in every city and town of our State and along every rural roadside.

The Eight-plate Wood Stove. A miserable cabin of most primeval architecture was the old log school house. It had a cheerless and dreary look, and it had cheerless and dreary surroundings. There was no attempt at ornamentation within or without. The center of the room was occupied by a large eight-plate wood stove which smoked furiously all forenoon and began to give forth great waves of heat about the time the short winter day was closing. Dilapidated and badly riveted, the stove sometimes collapsed to the imminent risk of life and limb of adjacent urchins.

Near the head of the little room a rheumatic desk and a chair that had seen better days marked the location of the "Master." On either side of the stove, extending nearly the length of the room, were backless benches economically made of slabs sawed from the outer portion of logs and supported by rungs thrust through auger holes at irregular intervals. To these benches all the little culprits were condemned till they reached the dignity of writing in a copy book and cyphering on a slate.

Then they were promoted to the writing desk where they were scared on benches of the same construction as those already noted, but had before them a slanting board fastened in the wall and running the length of the room on which were placed their literary implements.

One side of the room was devoted to the boys; the other, to the girls. Sometimes when some luckless kid had committed some heinous offense such as laughing aloud or pinching his neighbor, the relentless master would condemn him to the cruel and unnatural (?) punishment of sitting with the girls.

Ventilation of the Old Log School. Ventilation was plentiful. Generally some of the small glass panes of the small windows were broken. When arctic blasts were most severe the openings were sometimes closed with paper pasted over or hats volunteered for the emergency, but the chinks and cracks and crevices of walls and floor were numerous and ever present.

When the cold wave was intense the big boys and big girls invaded the seats appropriated to the small fry, whilst the diminutive codgers sat on the floor or where they might. No one cared much where they were.

When the lethargic mass of iron was at length aroused to do a few stunts in the radiation of heat, they had their slab seats to themselves and took their baking as best they might.

Into the pen generally from 80 to 100 humans were crowded during the school days of each successive winter. How they all got in I don't know, and it is not my business to solve the problem at this late day; but there they were—big boys and big girls, small boys and small girls, and the master, the man who wielded the birch most artistically and incidentally, "set copies," taught the "A B C's," worked out the hard "sums" in the arithmetic and generally "boarded around," a week at one place, a week at another, amongst the patrons. The packing was very like sardines in a box, only sardines don't have feelings and boys and girls do.

"A sketch of the imagination?" says the reader. No, a pen photo, brief and rude but accurate in its lines, of the building where the writer and most of his age began the ascent of Helicon—a fair type of the average school house in all rural communities, and generally in towns and cities as well, even up to the middle portion of the last century.

The building was not always a log one; but log or frame, the insufficient space, the torturing benches, the broken window-panes, the lack of comfort or beauty, internal or external, were the same.

"Modes of discipline and theory of school government? The law of love and moral suasion?" did you say. Marhap that was the name of it; but, whatever, it was, it was rubbed in thoroughly and frequently with birch and hickory.

The bundles of rods on pegs above the master's desk were the one and only ornament of the room. They took the place of maps and mottoes. Rods, did I say? I used to think they were the size of saplings.

Men From the "Old Log School." And yet a crown of glory hovers over the "Old Log School House." Scant were its comforts and equally scant, too often, were the attainments of the "masters." Scant was the length of the school term and the literary pabulum of the few school books of the day.

And yet from the "Old Log School House" came a race of giants. From it came Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay; from it came Lincoln and Grant, and the millions who carried the Flag of the Free from Atlanta to the sea, from the Potomac to the Gulf.

From the "Old Log School House" came judges and legislators, authors and editors, educators and scientists. Dollars are lavished to-day on educational agencies for every cent that was expended three-fourths of a century ago. Teachers, text books, modes have wondrously improved. But do we get as much proportionately from our scholastic palaces as from the old log school house? It is doubtful. Then there were no thousands of pupils. Then there were no gilded and royal roads to learning. All had to be obtained by pertinacity of personal application. But that very labor against obstacles formed a rugged character that served well in life's battle.

A POPULAR VERDICT

Based on Evidence of Gettysburg People.

Grateful thousands tell it—Of weak backs made strong—Of weak kidneys made well—Urinary disorders corrected. Gettysburg people add their testimony.

They praise Doans Kidney Pills. Gettysburg evidence is now complete.

Gettysburg testimony is confirmed; Reports of early relief substantiated.

Merit doubly proved by test of time.

Let a Gettysburg citizen speak.

Mrs. H. H. Ridinger, 245 W. Middle St., Gettysburg, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are not a new remedy in our family. We have used them for years for kidney disorders and pains in the back and they have always brought relief in a short time. I got this remedy at the People's Drug Store when I was suffering from backache, chills and dizzy spells. It soon drove away trouble."

OVER TWO YEARS LATER, Mrs. Ridinger said: "I can still say as I did two years ago when I gave a statement recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, that they are the finest kidney medicine in the world."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Ridinger has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Americans.

A native of any part of North or South America is literally an American since he is a native of one of the American continents. Usage, however, has narrowed the term so that "an American" is generally understood to be a citizen or native of the United States of America, while a native of Canada, Mexico, Central or South America is known as a "Canadian," "Mexican," "Brazilian," "Guatemalan" or the like. The reason for the usage does not lie in any feeling that the United States pre-empted stands for or overshadowed the other parts of the western hemisphere, but simply in the fact that, while Canada, Mexico, Brazil, the United States of Colombia, etc., are words which admit of adjective formation, "American" is the only adjective which can be formed from the name of our country to denote its citizens or to apply to its interests, industries, cities, etc.—New York Times.

To the Swift.

While the morning rush was on one day a young woman followed a trolley car down Broadway, running two blocks before she caught it. This she was able to do because of the jam of the traffic which retarded the car. Her efforts attracted attention on both sides of the street, and hurrying shop hands stopped to cheer her on. At Houston street, where she came panting up to the side of the car, she gasped to the conductor that she had left her pocket-book on the seat and wanted to get it. He obligingly held the car while she made a search. No pocketbook was found, but as she stepped off into the street again, her eyes filled with tears. There came a shout from behind. It was the motorman of the succeeding car, and in his hand as he leaned over his brake he held the pocketbook. "Here it is, lady," he said. "Don't cry. You only caught the car ahead."—New York Post.

Meat in Middle Ages.

Much of the medieval meat, which Cobbett says was plentiful and cheap, must have been poor stuff. Until the introduction of root crops in the eighteenth century cattle and sheep did not become even moderately plump till the end of summer, while lack of fodder made it impossible to keep much live stock during the winter. On St. Martin's day (Nov. 11) arrangements were usually made for slaughtering on a large scale, and for the next six months fresh meat worth eating was practically unobtainable. Until the spring grass was again ready there was a run on salted beef and salted mutton. Salted beef is excellent—for a change. But have you ever tried salted mutton?—London Graphic.

Futility of Flattery.

Nothing is ever gained by flattery. To the serious man flattery in the form of sincere praise makes him more responsible and only sadder because he knows how much he falls below what is expected of him and what he expects of himself. Lip flattery makes a real man feel as though his sex had been mistaken. He feels as though he had been given carling tons instead of a razor for his morning toilet.—New York Telegram.

What is a cold in the head? Nothing to worry about if you treat it with Ely's Cream Balm. Neglected, the cold may grow into catarrh, and the air-passages be so inflamed that you have to fight for every breath. It is true that Ely's Cream Balm masters catarrh, promptly. But you know the old saying about the ounce of prevention. Therefore use Cream Balm when the cold in the head shows itself. All druggists, 50c., or mailed by Ely Bros., 50 Warren St., New York.

Monday Evening Attraction

THE AMERICAN GIRLS.

This company is so well named that the reader can get a reasonably clear idea of its character by taking into account the many charming things about a truly typical American girl as we have known her in history since the time of the discovery of the American continent and as we have known her in our own day.

The types referred to are the Indian maiden, the Puritan or Quaker girl, the Colonial miss, the hoopskirt girl, the basque style girl and the modern girl.

The idea is to show, not a cheap comedy, but a fine example of American girlhood.

Music is a prominent feature of the American Girls' program, a new sort of music in its arrangement and presentation. It will be a historical number showing glimpses of American girl life and bringing out in prominent view the part she has played in American historical events and the social life of a nation.

There will be instrumental and vocal solos, orchestral numbers and readings, all of which will be more or less descriptive of the periods represented.

A sketch will be built around the story of the making of the American flag and other events in history in which the American girl has played a conspicuous part.

These instruments will be used: The piano, clarinet, cornet, drums, violin, cello and saxophone.

In one of the states where it was given the legislator who introduced a reform marriage bill said he got his inspiration to do so from hearing Mr. Ott's lecture. But whether he delivers this lecture or one of his other subjects he is always alike forceful, entertaining and inspiring. He has appeared before more than 3,000 audiences in America, and more than 2,500 copies of his books have been Playground. I do not know of any better way to teach a boy to be honorable and straight than to give him a chance to play with his comrades. In the playground he learns without any suggestion of rebellion against instruction and precept and preaching. He learns it because he does not want anybody else to cheat him and is "down" on the boy that does not play fair. And in the long run, because he is "down" on the boy that does not play fair, he will establish standards of conduct which we must maintain in the community and particularly in our great cities. If there is one thing that we need more than another it is the constant emphasis among our citizens of that spirit of fair play, that willingness to give and take, that generosity in defeat and that lack of assertiveness in victory which we identify with true sport and which is learned best of all in childhood upon the playground.—Justice Charles E. Hughes, United States supreme court.

Guiding Principles. Equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political; peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations—entangling alliances with none; the support of the state governments in all their rights, as the most competent administrations for our domestic concerns and the surest bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies; the preservation of the general government in its whole constitutional vigor as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad; " " " freedom of religion; freedom of the press; freedom of person under the protection of the habeas corpus, and trial by juries impartially selected—these principles form the bright constellation which has gone before us and guided our steps through an age of revolution and reformation.—From first inaugural address of President Jefferson.

Strength of Past Mistakes. Because our ancestors lived in bud-died cities we go on building upon narrow and tortuous streets, slinking our capital in mistakes which age makes it more and more difficult to rectify. The original cowpaths of Boston have become picturesque slums which support innocent ladies and stifle the health and the happiness of other people's children. Attack these slums, and you attack helplessness itself. Try to widen and ventilate, and you will find that you have struck at the security of the innocent. This is the real strength of the past and the overwhelming grip it has upon our lives. It lives on, not because intelligence can defend it, but because it has become so intimate a part of us that to cut it out seems a little too cruel.—New Republic.

Angieworms and Rain. Just why the angieworm comes out of the ground after a soaking rain when its natural tendency is to seek the deep, moist part of the earth in times of drought was long a puzzle to the naturalists. The enthusiastic fisherman will tell you that the only way to find any fishing worms when the soil is very dry is by digging down to where it is damp or by sprinkling the ground thoroughly the night before you intend to dig. It is evident that the Lumbricidae like water. The other recently discovered fact about them is that they also like air and cannot live without it. When it has rained until the earth is thoroughly saturated Mr. Angieworm has to crawl out of the ground in order to keep from drowning.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

World's Finest Equestrian Group. London's statues are generally the laughing stock of foreign visitors. They are called "jokes in stone" and other rude names. It is all the more gratifying to find one at least of these generally despised objects gaining the applause of qualified judges. A party of Belgian sculptors and artists on a recent visit were moved to proclaim their conviction that the quadriga of "Victory" on the arch at the top of Constitution hill was not only the finest equestrian group in England, but in the whole world! The sculptor, Captain Adrian Jones, once told the writer that it was twenty years after the first sketch was made that the group was finally put in position.—London Standard.

The Hot Air Furnace. There was a young publisher who made a sudden fortune by appealing to that largely neglected class which we call society. Gaining riches, the young publisher retired and was seen less and less in his old haunts. "Where's Lawrence?" some one asked of "Mr. Dooley." Dooley answered, "Oh, he's uptown now, warming his hands at the social register."

Russia. Russia took its denomination from the Rossi, or Russi, a people of the south of Russia, who possessed themselves of the country in the declining days of the Greek empire. Being the predominant inhabitants, they imposed their name on all the rest.

Winning a Pleasant Look. Father—There, now look pleasant, boys. Here's a penny for each of you! (After the picture is taken) Finely done! Now give me the pennies back again.—Merrimondorfer Blatter.

The Worm. The Meek One—My wife says I'm a "worm." The Friend—Why don't you retaliate? The Meek One—Why, if I turned! she'd be sure of it.—Puck.

Flattery is the worst and falsest way of showing our esteem. Don Smith

Mother Remembers. A hall bedroom, a battered suit case, a single bed, a cheap washstand, plaster falling from the walls, loneliness and— A post card from mother! Your birthday! Huh! Almost forgot. Funny that mother didn't forget. No-o, she didn't forget. It isn't a mother's way. What, weeping? Let 'em come, boy. Tears more manly were never shed. Save the card. It's sacred. Twenty years from now you'll weep over it again and thank God for the chance. Say a prayer for its sender, the best mother a fellow ever had. And then sit down and write—well, write just the kind of letter she's been waiting to receive from her boy.—Cleveland Press.

Napoleon's Ocean Prison. The Iron duke was responsible for Napoleon's exile to St. Helena. Returning from India in 1806, Wellington's ship touched at St. Helena, and the soldier was heard to remark upon the utter barrenness and desolation of the place. Upon getting into the ship's gig after taking leave of the civil and military authorities of the island Wellington said to the governor, "If I had an enemy whom I wished to bury alive I'd send him to this island." The overthrow of Napoleon gave him the "enemy" and the wish, and he did not forget the place.

Would Waste Nothing. A woman was engaging a cook, and, having almost brought the interview to a successful termination, said: "There is one thing, Mary: I do hope you are not wasteful." "Wasteful, mum! Why, Lor' bless you, I'd eat till I busted rather than waste anything!"—London Tri-Bits.

France. The name of France is derived from the Franks, or Franks, a people of Germany who seized that part of the country nearest the Rhine and settled there. Later on they subdued Paris and made that the royal seat of their increasing empire.

THE POLITICAL BATTLE.

One of the hardest fought political battles in the history of the county has closed. On the county ticket it was a divided victory. The judicial fight though called non-partisan was largely along party lines. The best interests of the parties often require representative candidates upon non-partisan judicial tickets, and that was the condition in this district. J. L. Butt became the candidate of the Democrats because of his strength, because he could make the best fight for the position, and because of his many friendships. He was acknowledged by friend and foe as the best vote getter the party could name and its strongest candidate. Through consistent team work was given to the candidacy of Mr. Butt.

On the other hand the Republicans named their strongest candidate in Mr. McPherson. He had elements of strength outclassing all other candidates in his party. He was strenuously supported by friends and party workers. It is one of the gratifying elements of the campaign that there was no resort in the fight for Mr. Butt to the personal against his opponent. At the start it was recognized that in Mr. McPherson, Mr. Butt would have a strong opponent, that he was a lawyer of ability and high character and was accorded honorable treatment as such. It was the lack of wisdom of supporters that called forth criticism.

The result of the contest is that the district will have a capable judge and one the people can expect will make a name for himself as a just judge.

SUFFRAGE CAUSE.

The result of the equal suffrage campaign in the State is most gratifying. With a vote in its favor of about two in Adams, of over 300,000 in the State, about 50,000 short of adoption, the battle for liberty for half of the people is nearer the goal. It was a splendid tribute to the principle back of the issue. The first balloting on a suffrage amendment must be largely educational. It is a new idea that must be broken into the minds of the people, who have been born and lived with minds and environments closed to the idea. Men fought centuries to obtain their liberty of the ballot. Now the men must be educated to the idea that such liberty knows no distinctions of sex, that it is a human right. Adams county and Pennsylvania have made a magnificent beginning toward the goal of equal liberty that in a few years will come, not only in this State, but in this country and over the greater part of the world.

Instructions to Game Protectors.

Dr. Kalbiuss, Secretary of the State Board of Game Commissioners has issued the following instructions to game protectors:

The open season for game in Pennsylvania is now in full blast, and I call your attention to that provision of the Act of April 21st, 1915, found in Section 8 of said Act, page 95 of the pamphlet containing the Game, Fish and Forestry Laws, and relating to the shipment of game. Heretofore it has been the practice of numerous gunners in this State, especially market hunters, to go into one section of the State, kill perhaps their limit of either birds or animals, box the same, ship them to their homes or elsewhere, then go into another county and repeat, going again into the third county, and sometimes into more counties, in this way violating the law regarding the number of birds or animals that might be killed, and covering their tracks in a way that prevented detection, to the great injury of true sportsmen. Sportsmen of the State conceived the idea of stopping this procedure, and are attempting to do this through the provisions as found in said Section 8.

In the enforcement of this Act, you are to use good judgment, but under no condition are you to permit or authorize the shipment of game of any kind, unless it is properly marked, as required by the Act, and accompanied by the owner of the game. You will frequently be importuned by sportsmen to permit the shipment of game to a friend or to this point and that point in the State. This permission cannot be granted. The purpose of the Act was to stop just that very condition, and while a hardship may be imposed upon a few in the State, the benefit that will come to the many will far over-balance the slight injury thus imposed.

Where a sportsman starts in good faith with his game, the same being boxed or in his baggage, properly marked, under ordinary conditions we see no reason why a prosecution should be brought, if during the course of travel he became separated from his game and happened to travel upon a separate train or even upon separate days. The intent of the shipment or transfer of game is the question to be considered, and you are not to prosecute in any case of this character, without first consulting this office. The purpose of this provision was to protect and preserve game, and to force would-be violators into a position where they cannot kill game beyond the limit at (Continued on 8th page).

Glaciers in Nebraska.

Many of the physical features of eastern Nebraska were produced by sheets of ice that invaded the region during and after the earlier stages of the great ice age. At the opening of the glacial epoch the great Kewadin glacier spread southward and covered large parts of the Dakotas, Minnesota and Iowa and extended thence into eastern Nebraska, where it was probably several hundred feet thick. This first stage of glaciation was brought to a close by the melting of the ice in a warmer interglacial time or stage—the Aftonian.

A remarkable assemblage of animals invaded the region after the ice had disappeared, and the bones and teeth of many of these animals have been found in the Aftonian deposits of western Iowa. The late Professor Samuel Calvin identified the remains of horses, camels, stags, elephants, mastodons, mammoths and sloths. When these animals lived in western Iowa the climate there must have been comparatively mild and vegetation very abundant.—Geological Survey Bulletin.

THE GREEN MANIKIN

A Story With "Heart Interest"

By AGNES G. BROGAN

When David Bronson heard an American speaking voice in that little far-away Parisian restaurant an emotion that was surprising surged within him. "So this was what had been the trouble of late, this the cause of his unfinished book—homesickness, pure old-fashioned homesickness."

Long ago, as a lad, he had realized this desperate feeling. Now the sound of that familiar tongue brought back a longing to be "among his own" which was almost unbearable, back again in "little old New York," for from her accent the speaker had also lived in that vicinity. Bronson whirled about to look at her. Demure and unaware of admiring glances, she sat at a nearby table, "conspicuously simple" in her close fitting black suit and turban.

Bronson struggled against an uncontrollable desire to hear again that soft voicing of his mother tongue, then with a muttered, "May I?" sank into a seat at the opposite side of the table. The restaurant being unduly crowded, his intrusion was calmly taken for granted. Happily absorbed, he gazed at the lovely, downcast face of his companion, and she, glancing up at last, smiled. A frank, engaging smile it was, like that of a friendly child.

"The suit?" Bronson asked politely, while the girl's smile deepened. "So you, too, are American," she said. All the pent-up longings of the man's home yearning soul broke forth at her question.

"American—yes," he answered, "and if you could but know the joy it gives me merely to be again in the presence of an American! I might have sought out my countrymen here, I suppose, but—he laughed shortly—"I did not recognize my need until I heard your voice."

The girl leaned impulsively forward. "I know," she breathed. "Oh, I know! For weeks I've been fighting off the desire to go back. Sometimes it was almost too strong for me. I've got to stay here, you see. I must, until—" "Until," he prompted gently. The girl drew back, continuing her meal. "Until I make good," she answered quietly.

"Student?" the man questioned. She nodded her head. "There are so many of us," she said ruefully. "would be artists, musicians—mostly failures!" "And you?" "The girl's low laughter ended in a wry smile. "I'm an art failure," she replied, with a shrug of the shoulders. Bronson's quick glance was sympathetic.

"Perhaps not," he encouraged. "Better stick it out a little longer and see." She arose, drawing on her gloves, and stood looking now on the gloves, now on him. "I intend to," she answered brightly. With visible regret the author also arose. "Pardon the boldness of a fellow American," he entreated. "but may I not hope to see you again?" "Why not?" the girl carelessly responded. "I dine here every day."

So it happened that the small table beneath the window came quite naturally to be a place of meeting, a place for the exchange of simple confidences, for comforting recollections of home beloved scenes and home happy times. To the man this one hour was a sort of panacea for all the trials of a troubled day. About it his dreams centered as a reward for nighty hours of writing. And the girl's open pleasure in these meetings was a constant growing joy. "Do you know," she asked in her ingenuous way, "I cannot get over the idea that I have known your face before? It was strangely familiar from the first and yet—"

Then David Bronson knew that his hour of announcement had come. It had been a gratifying thing to hide for a time from the paths of fame and to feel that his unknown personality had powers of its own to awaken interest and pleasure. With a sigh he drew forth his card and placed it before her.

"David B. Bronson," the girl read aloud, while recollection widened in her eyes.

"Not," she said in a tone of awe—"not David Bronson, the author?" He nodded abruptly. "And you are writing a book over here," she went on slowly. "a book with a French setting perhaps and one of your wonderful American heroines?" "The heroine," he confessed, "proves a disappointment. She is so exactly what she seems to be—commonplace, no human heart interest."

The girl turned wearily aside. His admission of greatness seemed all at once to put him far from her presumption of friendship.

"Look about you," she said. "You'll find human heart stories among us all."

Bronson got hastily into his coat. "Just this once," he begged, "allow me to walk with you."

Heretofore this request had been refused. Now the girl deliberated. "You may come," she agreed.

Down the sunlit narrow street they went, crowd-jostling her slim figure against the shelter of his arm—on through poorer districts and poorer ones where the limit of dingy shabbiness seemed to have been reached the girl passed.

"There," she pointed at the top of the tenement, "is my home."

"Home?" the man breathed contentedly; then, with wondering pity he repeated the word, "Home!"

"Goodby," said the girl and extended her hand.

"Goodby until tomorrow," reminded the man, his smile unchanged.

Smiling, too, she went up the narrow stair, but when tomorrow came she was absent from her place at the restaurant table. An atmosphere of unaccountable cheerlessness pervaded the sunny niche near the window. Bronson fretted impatiently at the girl's delay. He had intended to inquire today more particularly into her manner of living. His night had been troubled and wakeful at the thought of her bright presence, braving the struggle for existence. What sacrifice and deprivation might she not be undergoing for a dream of art which might be no more than a dream! This, at least, his own knowledge could decide for her if she would come. But the opposite chair remained vacant.

"Mademoiselle comes not today," the garrulous waiter remarked. "Mademoiselle, 'the green manikin,' is absent."

Bronson sat up with a start. "Mademoiselle who?" he asked rather sharply.

"She who dines with you," the waiter imperturbably replied, "mademoiselle who is what you call 'manikin' or model for the great modiste. Surely monsieur has heard of the green manikin from Frauquetta's."

Yes, Bronson had heard, remembered having seen the model pictured in Frauquetta's window, a graceful figure clad always in garments soft tinted as the ocean's foam, and the model was his frank faced student—she of the tenement room. The two seemed irreconcilable.

Abruptly he left his untasted meal: a satirical smile curled his lips. So his sympathy had all been wasted, imposed upon. The green model of Frauquetta's was evidently in no need of pity.

For a moment he hesitated before the glittering letters of the modiste's sign, then passed into the miniature theater. Before the parted curtain he waited, watching tensely the girlish figure framed in the gleaming lights. Clad in bright green from shoulder to satin heel stood the girl whose appealing presence had so deeply stirred his heart.

Mechanically, automatically, like some manikin in a play, she moved across the brilliant stage, displaying to an admiring audience the beauties of her costume. Bitterly the man turned from her steadily painted smile to pass out again into the street. So the struggling art student, the beloved little student, had never been. Across his very memory of her must ever flash that crimson painted smile. He frowned disapproval when next day the girl herself slipped quietly into her accustomed seat.

"May I tell you," she asked, "the story of a green model who, unlike your difficult heroine, is not exactly as she seems, not exactly commonplace? Her story may even have heart interest?"

Wondering, he silently bowed his head. The girl laughed tremulously. "Fame is an elusive thing," she quoted. "One may more quickly find her because of one's ability to wear a certain color than for the reward of tireless years of study. Over in America my old father and my mother and the sister who has always been sick wait for a success in art which was prophesied surely for me. To this purpose were carefully—oh, so carefully—hoarded the savings of years. This had also been my father's youthful dream—to go abroad and perfect his own sketches, to achieve fame which critics promised. Marriages and later cares had forced this dream aside, but now it was to be fulfilled, gloriously fulfilled, in myself, the daughter."

"But that which had seemed an assured inherited talent at home became here a doubtful promise, and at length the savings were gone—all gone! Do you see, then," she cried passionately, "what I have been doing? Deceiving them all along; writing, as I fancied the glow on their faces, of how one sketch had been accepted, of how another brought the check inclosed, and all the time—all the time I was but a dressmaker's model, a manikin in green. How else could one make money here alone in a foreign land? But now—her voice broke despairingly—"how dare I go back, I with my mocking boast of art?"

Something gripped hard at the man's throat, and his hand reached out to clasp the girl's.

"Tomorrow," he said slowly—"tomorrow I want to see these sketches." Tomorrow he saw them. As he turned them over, looking intently at each, an expression of admiration gathered on his face. When he came to the last he looked up at her and said: "It's the old story—genius stooping to feed on crumbs from the rich man's table while it secured recognition." And to two old people seated before their farmhouse door there came one eve a letter. "Read it," said the mother. "It's from our girl beyond the sea." The old man glanced quickly back from the closely written page. "Why," he cried—"why, she's to illustrate that great author's new book, mother, our own little girl!"

In speechless joy they gazed into each other's face. Then together they finished the letter.

"Books and pictures must ever wait for love," wrote the girl. "so David Bronson and I are coming home together. Your daughter has married the author."

English Military Offenses.
There are more than a dozen different offenses for which a soldier may be sentenced to death while on active service. The first on the list of death offenses applies to a commanding officer and reads, "Shamefully delivering up a garrison when in command of troops, without due necessity—punishment, death." A soldier can be shot for throwing away his rifle or sword in the presence of the enemy, for cowardice or for leaving his commanding officer in order to plunder. If he forfeits his way past a sentry on active service he may be sentenced to death or for assaulting any one bringing up provisions for the troops. A soldier is expressly forbidden while on active service to commit any offense against a resident of the country in which he is fighting under pain of death, nor may he break into any house in search of plunder or discharge his rifle intentionally to create a false alarm on the march. A soldier while acting as sentry who is found sleeping at his post may be shot. Any man causing or joining in a mutiny is liable to be shot. Desertion or attempt at desertion while on active service is naturally a death offense.—London Opinion.

Dreams.
What is the purpose of dreams? Dr. Isador H. Coriat answers the question thus in "The Meaning of Dreams."

It can be shown through dream analysis that dreams subserve a definite function in our mental life in that they really act as protectors and not as disturbers of sleep. This guardianship of sleep by means of dreams is due to the persistent dynamic action of the censor. In sleep the censor is exceedingly active, and its function is to protect sleep from the mass of repressed emotions which threaten to overwhelm the sleeper in the shape of a dream. This is done by means of the dream mechanisms, in which the dream thoughts are fused and displayed, thus undergoing such disguise and symbolization as to be unrecognizable to the sleeper and consequently not disturbing to him. When the censor nods or is evaded, when the literal dream thoughts bombard and invade consciousness in an undisguised form, sleep is disturbed and insomnia results.

Benjamin Harrison.
"Do you think," Benjamin Harrison once asked Louis T. Michener, his campaign manager, "that I am a cold man?"

"I don't think so," General Michener answered, emphasizing the pronoun, "because I am acquainted with you, but persons do say that I am the only living man who hasn't been chilled by a Harrison cold blast. I understand your habits and your moods, and when you pass me in the street and don't speak to me I know the reason."

"Well," Harrison replied, "I do get into a subject when I am thinking about it and at such times may seem a little blind and distant."

"But Benjamin Harrison," General Michener told the writer of this article, "was not a cold man. No man is cold whom children and dogs love, and all the children and dogs of Indianapolis knew Benjamin Harrison. He saw them always, and they saw him."—New York Sun.

Agate and Onyx.
The distinction between agate and onyx is not apparent to every one, as is indicated by the samples of the two minerals received by the United States geological survey with requests for information. Onyx marble, or Mexican onyx, is composed of calcium carbonate or banded limestone. True agate is a variety of silica. Onyx marble is much softer than agate and is rarely used for gems, but when onyx is obtained in pieces of sufficient size it is cut and polished for small ornamental objects like inkstands and paper weights, as well as for table tops and soda water fountains.

Trick of the Smugglers.
Russia was once overrun with counterfeit notes. The police felt certain that the notes were imported, which proved to be the case. One day an accident solved the mystery. Some packages of lead pencils arrived there from England, and, while examining, one of the pencils fell out. On sharpening it to use the customs officer was surprised to find the lead but a short piece, while the inner portion was hollow and contained a counterfeit note.

Net Worth Quarreling Over.
"Dubbs and his wife never have any arguments about money matters." "How fortunate!" "Yes, Mrs. Dubbs says that a mere trifle like Dubbs' salary should not be allowed to come between them, so she takes it all."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Saying "on Tick."

Fashion Demand.
